PROPERTY AGENTS RAISE VITAL FUNDS FOR CHARITY

The Bristol Property Agents Association (BPAA) has raised £2,452.68 for the Bristol branch of Macmillan Cancer Support.

The former president of the BPAA, Chris Haworth, was moved to nominate this charity following the fantastic care and support his mother received from Macmillan when she was suffering from cancer.

The money was raised for the charity through a series of fundraising events held by BPAA over last 12 months, including the annual BPAA golf tournament, tennis tournament, boules tournament and quiz night.

Macmillan Cancer Support improves the lives of people affected by cancer. The charity provides practical, medical and financial support and pushes for better cancer care. Its primary goal is to reach and improve the lives of everyone living with cancer.

Chris Haworth, last year's president of the BPAA and partner at Alder King said: "We wanted to show our support for the great work Macmillan does for so many people affected by cancer. The charity helps countless people and their families in Bristol by providing care, advice and support and we are pleased to be able to make this donation towards its efforts."

Ian Dore from Macmillan Cancer Support commented: "Associations such as the Bristol Property Agents are essential to Macmillan's fund raising efforts and such dedication is reflected in the great amount raised. There are 5 new cases everyday in Bristol and corporate entities can benefit greatly from a partnership with the number one charity brand. These are always mutually beneficial and the BPAA have been absolutely superb in that regard. It is a significant figure that will help hugely, those affected by cancer."
